Writing and submitting articles to article directories is a great way to promote any website or blog because you can get keyword anchored backlinks. As most Internet Marketers know, the more links you acquire that are pointing to your site, the better it is for you. Generally speaking, all links are good but you must make sure they are hyperlinked from a keyword you wish to rank for in the search engines. Lots of marketers comment on blogs to get links but much of the time the link back to their site is anchored on their first name, not good, unless you want to rank for your first name.

This is a great reason to spend time Article Marketing. For one thing, you can choose the keyword you want to hyperlink back to your site. Another important factor in a site's link profile is the content of the page you link from. Because you can build links from articles that you have written, you also control the content and can make it relevant. Getting backlinks that are keyword anchored and are in an article which is relevant, will help you create a desirable link profile for your website or blog. When you have keyword anchored back links pointing to your web page from a page with relevant content, you will increase your ranking.
